Instructions

Please invest some time in thinking about and responding to the questions and prompts in this "Your Story" document. They are designed to help you ponder the meaning and purpose of your life, your successes and failures and the lessons you've learned along the way, your attitudes, your goals, and your thinking on the legacy you would like to leave behind. Given "Your Story" and the issues you've faced are unique to each individual, please treat this document as a guide and spend more time on those questions that resonate most with you and less on those that you find less relevant.

Please also complete the Appendix, which includes your Family Tree and a listing of other significant people in your life. This Appendix will be used as a reference in your other TIGER 21 Defenses.

In addition to sharing this document with their Groups, many TIGER 21 Members have found it beneficial to share it with their family members/significant others as a way to pass along their story to their loved ones.

Section I: Meaning and Purpose

A. Your Narrative, Including Highs and Lows

- Write a short narrative autobiographical "sketch" highlighting the twists and turns of life that have brought you to where you are today.

Note grammar and spelling is not a strong skill for me. I expect some points to be unclear. I would welcome a marked-up version to me after the meeting for further work.

I will be sharing a quick picture show

- Growing up with 7 sisters
  - Getting into the car business
- Not a Latimer - My Heritage
  - I have a half brother
  - The new half-brother connections
- Bio Dad is still alive
- The new DNA Dutch connection
  - First meeting of Bio dad in the Netherlands
  - Rudie (ie dad) growing up rich and high class in Holland.
  - Rudie's Great Grandfather's wedding picture
  - House where they hide freedom fighters

- Rudie's house over a house in Saskatoon
  - Not following the rules
- Entrepreneur and rebel in Saskatoon
  - BFAM
  - Being a little Dutch man
    - Losing 45 lbs
    - Great great Grandfather's wedding picture

- How have you acquired your wealth? Did you sell a business, acquire an interest in a company as you assumed leadership roles, inherit wealth, and/or amass assets through one or more investment strategies?

I have built and sold several businesses in the alternative lending sector.

- First via 'Buy-here pay-here' car financing, (all under $5000, deep subprime), Pawnshops, Payday loans, small equity mortgages, car accident injury loans and installment loans
- Starting in the early to mid 1980s to 1992 build and operated 4 used (very used, perhaps beaters) car lots with the first 'buy here pay here' financing for the un-financeable, super subprime market along with one successful pawnshop. Sold for $1m. Invested $300k in the stock market. Blindly following my brokers lead I was able to quickly turn that $300k into $100k. An ugly experience. I lost about $200k and my first lesson that I was not an investor. I have gone back and taken that lesson several times. The course has become more expensive over the years.
- 1994 -2005 Build Instaloans with 50% partner to 100 stores across Canada in the emerging Payday loan sector. Got caught up in class actions which stopped further expansion. Sold business in 2005 for $50m. I built the business and partner sold the business. Partner was dragged along for the last 8 years with virtually no involvement but then managed to negotiate the sale for $50m in cash.
- 1994-today - Built an accident and inheritance settlement advance company. Currently has $4.5m book of loans and 6 employees. Net profit of $1m annually.
- 2010 – 2016 – Took Cash Canada out of receivership from bank for $1.5m. Cash Canada was a chain of approximately 10 pawnshops and 12 payday loan sites.
  - Built both business units. First month out of receivership lost $300k. Continued with decreasing losses for 12 months.
  - Built out the pawnshops to 18 sites and sold for $29m ($20m cash and $9m shares) in Nov 2016.
  - Built PDL sites to 63 branches across 4 princes, BC (6) Alberta (45) Sask (6) and Ont (6) plus 2 online divisions
    - August 2016 Pivoted the 45 Alberta from PDL with an average loan of $450 to consumer term loans with an average of $2,500. This required significant additional capital.
    - To facilitate that pivot had to agree to share 50% of the loan business net profit with ATB in exchange they
      - Provided a banking agency agreement where Cashco gets 50% of the bank services fees and they provided a custom bank suite of service and Cashco branded platform
      - Arranged for a $60m syndicated loan facility with ATB at 8%

Of interest - Other capital has been deployed in funding mortgages and acquiring property, residential property development, startups and failed startups however none of these positions have generated significant capital to date. But rather have served as warehouse for previous capital acquired. I have not done a good job of putting this acquired capital to work. I have always felt I was too busy, not skilled enough or too busy with the operational businesses to make real attempts.

- I have not created other wealth outside of building active businesses in the alternative lending space.

- Nov 2017 sold the Cash Canada Pawn operations with 18 sites for $22US consisting of $15m US cash and $7m in shares in the acquiring roll up/start up American company out of Florida and supported by PE out of New York. Today the operations have expanded to 90 stores and is positioned for further growth or acquisition by a larger strategic partner.

- Highlight accomplishments, passions and motivation, lessons learned about yourself, who and what is most important to you, the story of your wealth creation events and activities.

Note to self
  - Hand out first and second mission statements
  - Hand out flyer of Cash for Cars 'n' Stuff
  - Show picture of standing outside car lot

Summary

I really learned about myself in my mid 30s when I completed my second mission statement. The process to be meaningful for me started a journey of discovery that took over 6 months to produce the second statement. The internalization of the mission was a persistent and diligent practice for over 10 years of my life. It was the most productive and on purpose time of my life. Perhaps it is my greatest accomplishment. It made me come to terms with my mortality and cemented the concept of a 'Noble Cause' in my being. Over the years, I have been well served by this accomplishment.

Final thoughts: My passion has become my purpose. I have grown to be that which I wrote. Perhaps I should have written more.

I have come to believe due to this perspective I have become more an "Impact Capitalist than a Capital Capitalist'. This understanding changes the way I view day to day business and appears to be to appear in efforts to do good, give back and establish a B Corp approach.

- Draw a timeline illustrating high and low points and corresponding events in your family's (and/or people significant to you with respect to) increases and decreases in financial, human and intellectual capital.

Brief business timeline. The rest of the document outline my personal and family growth.
1957 Born
1974 Graduated grade 12 country school
1978-80 Practice marriage and divorced with one child
1980-84 Several Failed Used car lot attempts
1985-89 Used car success ending in five lots
1986 Married to Sharon. This one has stuck to this very day
1989 Failed Car lot that pivoted to a pawnshop
1990-1992 Successful pawnshop sold for $1.1m to Cash Canada Pubic company via a vendor take back note.
1992-1994 Cash defaults on my VTB debt, take over as CEO raise additional $2m, expanded to 12 stores, but as it was still losing money, I fired myself as CEO in late 1994.
1994-2005 Started a small office with the idea to start four different loan businesses. Accident settlement loans, Equity mortgages, scrap jewelry purchases, and larger private pawn loans. Shortly after starting these enities I became aware of the payday loan opportunity. Open that store and as was business asked a friend if he wanted to partner. Built from one store to 101 stores and sold in April 2005 for $50m.
2005-2010 Defended against class actions. Settlement was eventually hobbed together for $5m which an additional action holding out until 2015 to settle for another $1m

2010 Took over Cash Canada from bankruptcy and began rebuilding
2010 divided Cash Canada into two entities
2016 Sold pawn operations for $30m CDN in cash and shares of acquiring enitiy.
2015-2019 Pivoted payday loan business to installment loans with the help of ATB with a $40m loan plus a partnership to bring meaningful banking to underbanked and forgotten communities.
2019 survived NDP government in Alberta who brought restrictive legislation that forced restructuring/pivoting and a $10m loss in the first year of their governing. Post NDP the company is significantly more substantial. Profitability is returning.
2019 forward – looking to expand to $120m outstanding with current branch network. Currently at $50m in outstanding loans. Have learned a secret sauce kind of insight from offering meaningful banking to the working poor.
2020-2023 Need to career path my way out of the CEO role and into more the chairman of the board role.

B. Your Values, Purpose and Philosophy

- How would you describe your values/fundamental guiding principles/beliefs?

There are two Mission statements written about 10 years apart in my early 20s and 30s that define me. Both are shared in the addendum if interested. Both written statements outline my intensions and aspirations and perhaps some maturing of thought from the first to the second. They still stand as my guide for day to day living.

Recently I found my first advertisement or mission statement to myself that I used to first guide me from a naive farm boy to a maturing adult in the big city. This was written after I was flat broke, in a rooming house and after reading the Magic of Thinking Big by David Schwartz. It was my guide to my first $1 million and my bridge to the next larger Mission Statement resulting form the reading of Stephen Covey's book the Seven Habits of Highly Effective People. These statements were guiding principles that I attempted to live my life by as a result of the absence to deep family connection or meaningful heritage. My way of forming an answer to the age-old question of "Who am I?"
What I now find interesting is to be connected to my DNA heritage. I'm Dutch. I had always thought I was really a German/Russian that at 5'8" tall had never grown to my full height. Perhaps part of the blond haired, blued eyed special race. I now find out via My Heritage and the DNA testing that I'm Dutch on my paternal side. And with the opportunity to meet my biological dad, in the Netherlands of all places I also get the change to reconcile myself to my Dutch essence. Its been and interesting 12 months trying to understand what's in me as the result of DNA and what's the result of my up bring. The classic nature verses nurture discussion and often hotly contested debate. I'm really no closer to the answer but have much more information to process.
The Dutch are known as is my biological dad and his forefathers as liberal thinkers with innovation and a boldness to take calculated risk. Further, I have come to know one grandparent was a famous recognized and awarded lawyer and the other an equally famous architect of 'school design architecture' in the Netherlands. Some of his buildings have been preserved as national historical sites. And the family history goes back hundreds of years including a connection to the Dutch colonies and suppression in Indonesian as plantations owners and oversees which undoubtedly means in our modern-day context overlords to suppression and slavery. Much to recognize, reconcile and put into context in my life. I have only just begun that journey.
I have a new family, a bio father and a new half sibling clan of brothers and sisters and we are all descendants from a rich history. Amazingly this instant family of Dutch-ness and connections comes with prepacked trust. It seems difficult to rationalize but an older brother comes with and expectation to behave like an older brother. Younger sister and brothers expect a certain amount of middle brotherly connection from me. And a dad who wants to share his journey and catch up on yours shows what appears to be a genuine and true interest in who you are and what you are doing today. Even giving words of encouragement in life's daily trails which stands in sharp and opposite comparison to by stepfathers, the man that raised me through the formative years, the man that was passive, hardworking, non-social, conservative and predictable parenting approach that was mostly felt by me as non-connecting and non-engagement.

Dauntingly is the new task of connecting with family as there are many layers to this onion that I have not peeled back. But the journey is fascinated and enlightening to me. The ripple effects are very significant but often slight at the same time. Like my children starting to declare they are in fact Dutch. And what that may mean to their self-perspectives. These impacts, some expected to be good and some bad, are not yet understood and indeed may only be part of an ongoing journey. The only thing for certain is it has started. I find some new energy from the journey. A new beginning. And as if proof to myself that I'm a little Dutch boy I have lost 45lbs to keep aligned with my little Dutch boy status (5'8") and thinking I would make my 5'4" great great grandfather, (as seem in his wedding picture) proud.
I'm Dutch. It's so far enlightening.

- What are you enjoying most in this phase of your life?

Personal – Not at peace enough to deeply enjoy. I enjoy being grateful
Getting in physical shape.
Looking forward and equally afraid of a 1300 km bike ride around the Netherlands next April as a challenge to spent time and get to know my new older half-brother, Robert is a CA and is a true accountant/consultant at heart.
Family – Not yet enjoying as I feel I do not do a good job of parenting adult children. I feel less connected
Starting to move my adult children into independence and towards homeownership. They were hanging around the house much to long as fully grown adults and I think we have stunted them from growing up. I have started to park and also get Sharon to leave the helicopter in the hanger.
Business – I enjoy the most the days where work is selfless and deeply on purpose. Those days are very rewarding.
Have embraced the concept of Impact Capitalist and setting the company on the path to becoming a B Corp.
Summary - I am still not comfortable or most importantly at peace with myself. I would like to be able to slow down and be better at being intentional. I not sure I'm enjoying the full favour of this phase.
I need to plan to not be the CEO of the active businesses but rather move to a chairman of the board role. I need to establish a family office with proper objectives and expectations along with the governance model.

C. Lessons Learned

- Write your "Top 10" list of lessons learned about yourself, about investing and wealth, and about others during your journey so far.

1. You have the freedom of choice to decide on your future.
2. Be humble
3. Be grateful
4. Be vulnerable
5. Be Enlightened. "Before enlightenment chop wood carry water, after enlightenment, chop wood carry water."
6. Be empathic. 'There but for the grace of God go I.' We are all only a small choice in the past away from a different life.
7. Remember always "This too shall pass"
8. To those that much is given much is expected.
9. Community matters.
10. Wealth is a job.
11. Golden Rule – People don't care how much you know until they know how much you care. Usually about them.

I have learned nothing on investment except that if I'm in an investment them given my track record it's likely something you don't want to be in.

This is still accurate today. I will need professionals to manage a family portfolio as I do not have the discipline in investing or buying and selling required.

- Highlight those lessons you've shared or plan to share with your children, grandchildren and others important to you.

Cliché' have wisdom in them.
I think we should be more embracing of cliché's. they are like little gifts of life's wisdom. I appreciate the Jewish culture as they seem to surround themselves with these little gems and can quickly reference one to access wisdom and anchor some intuition or thought. We in the west do not give cliché's enough respect. I think someone should write a book on cliché's. Likely it has been done and I'm simply don't know about it. In any event here are some current cliché's that I find myself referencing frequently and help anchor my version of Tim Latimer.

There for the Grace of God go I.
People don't care how much you know until they know how much you care.
The more you help others get what they want the more you get what you want.
It takes a village to grow a child. (it takes a village to grow and fully mature adult)
People don't quit companies they quit leaders
Be hard on the numbers not the people
Culture eats strategy for lunch
Don't sweat the small stuff. It's all small stuff.

I think naming an idea the moment it is born has magic in it. We often get an interesting idea and then lose the thought. I found that if I simply named the idea it takes forma and then one can explain it, work on it, and have others engage in it. This one secret of naming even a goofy name to concepts and strategies in foundational to practicing Constant and Never-ending Improvement. CANI

It takes a village to grow a child and I'm only a part of the community. I what them to grow to being happy productive members of the community that are at peace with their lives. On many fronts, I'm not the best example to this intention or how to pursue it with balance. I'm happy to share my journey but feel very self-centered to say or think mine is the way. I will write a book to put down what I feel I have learned. And as my family and future family remains connected to me they may read and perhaps in some way help them on their journey. Some way my even get a Doctorate in the school of hard knocks and in some way my story may serve as one of the courses.

These have not changed however I now am further sharing my perspective on business in general, personal finances, on all the details of the various businesses in the group, on the state of our affairs, on our wills and all other family arrangements. In short, I have become much more transparent.

Further I recently gave myself a Doctorate in the Universal School of Hard Knocks. This understanding I would like to pass on.

Recently after realizing that many of the people in the company had numerous initials behind their names. Credentials for their achievement in various Universities. I thought as I had taken many courses in the school of hard knocks that I likewise should have initials and as such I when to my marketing department and asked them to make me a card with credentials.
Hence, I gave myself some initials, some credentials for behind my name. These are my second set of cards for special occasions when I have time to explain and professionals will not take offense.

My special card now reads - Tim J Latimer FFB, CA^3 -, and when asked, I explain it stands for "2 fires and a bankruptcy, and 3 class actions'. My credentials in the School of Hard Knocks.

Section II: Current Situation

A. Family/Significant People in Your Life

- Definition and description of "Family."
  - When you think of the word "family," who do you consider to be members?
  - Describe your unique family, including structure, complexity, and challenges.
  - What are your family's strengths and assets that you want to preserve and build upon?

Family is the wife (Sharon) and our four adult unmarried children (Jolene, Jordan, Jillienne, Jesse). I have an older son but due to distance (Philippines) and dynamics am less connected.

Sharon family and her heritage plays a big part in our family. My unknown heritage and multi-level adopted background creates little to no impact.

I want to preserve that we strive and are grateful. That we never allow ourselves to be content or full of ego.

My recently known Dutch heritage is now starting to have a part to play. This is now a moving target. It seems like I have a whole new family of half sisters and brothers by three different mothers. And for the time being we all seem to want to be 'family' of some sort.

- Describe or create your "100 year plan" for your family/current heirs/future heirs.

I can honestly say I have not thought about this beyond trying to have some initial thoughts on how to give a hand up rather than a hand out as our kids hit the next stage of their life's.
I never thought of our wealth/funds in the context of being put to work for the next 100 years or for future generations.
Would like to hear how others have thought about this.

This has now become a real consideration. The idea of opening a family office that is respondable for taking care of the asset to provide hand up opportunities to future generations is the theme of this review. I'm asking the group for their thoughts.

Is a family office advisable and if so, what should one consider when establishing one?

Answers to Question 1 from 2017

In the beginning - A clean slate

This portion is an optional read. Please feel free to skip ahead to the next section, which is highlighted.

I grew up in a blended family of 9 kids. Understanding the family and my position in its impact in my formative years is essential to understanding me. I do not usually like to share the journey any more — it makes me feel like I'm making it "all about me," but I will share here as further background.

I hope this entertains. After many years, I realized it's a love story.

It's a love story that begins with the most unassuming of protagonists: a man who stutters.

This man with the stutter was understandably shy and quiet and, as could be expected — somewhat socially awkward.

Compounding his problems, the stuttering man also lived an isolated life on a farm in central Alberta.

But he was a man after all, and stutters or not wanted what all men tend to want when they come to a certain age — a female companion.

In service to this, he put an ad in the Saskatchewan Producer — the paper in the next province over — looking for a pen pal.

A female pen pal, to be clear. It was the 1940's version of a dating service for a stammering, stuttering, passive youngest child in a family of 12 children.

His ad garnered a response and though he might have been awkward in person and with broken speech, he turned out to be quite charming in print. After several years of writing back and forth he journeyed to Saskatchewan to woo his pen pal in person.

His stutter, he was happy to discover, did not prevent the lady companion on the receiving end of his letters from falling in love. He convinced her to marry him and move back to his farm in Alberta.

By 1957 they had four girls together. But within months of the youngest child's birth his wife died of complications due to the childbirth.

The stuttering man, now 39 years old with had four small girls to look after, stuck to what he knew would work — he placed another ad in the Saskatchewan Producer.

This time for a housekeeper.

Around that same time, in 1956, there was a Saskatchewan teenager who had been adopted at birth by a German Mennonite couple. She was 18 and not quite grown out of her rebellious stage when she became pregnant with a baby boy by a man whose identity she would never disclose.

Her adoptive parents supported her through the pregnancy but with the condition that she find the child a home and family within two years of his birth. If not, she would have to give the child up to them for adoption.

Her baby boy was born on Feb 1, 1957. The clock started to tick. When her child was a month old, with just 23 months left to find a family, she opened the Saskatchewan Producer.

It was that advertisement for a housekeeper on a farm in Alberta that caught her eye and propelled her into the crosshairs of fate. She was successful in getting the job in Alberta. She left her baby boy behind in Saskatchewan to help a man raise his four girls aged 6 months to 10 years. She herself was just 20.

Soon after arriving she used her female super powers to foster a relationship with the man who placed the ad — the stuttering famer— and after a few more months an agreement to marry and bring her son into the family was settled upon.

A wedding was arranged and I was legally adopted into the family and given the Latimer name.

I was not quite 2 years old and I was 2 months older than the youngest girl in the Alberta family, my new sister. We were a family. Blended with four girls and one boy — mom in her early twenties and dad in his early forties on a rural farm in central Alberta.

As she was still young and willing and as he still wanted to have a boy — to carry on the Latimer name — they decided to have another child.

A fifth daughter was born.

I now had five half-sisters.

The stuttering farmer, my stepdad, was unlucky at having boys. But he was still hopeful and my mom was still young and willing so they attempted again and my sixth sister was born. They called her Jackie. So at least she had a boy's name.

With more sisters stacking up before and after me it was clear I didn't belong anywhere. I was not part of the family of four girls that came before me and not part of the family of two new sisters that came after me. I was separate. Born out of wedlock with unknown origins by a young girl who herself had been adopted by Russian-German Mennonites and did not know her heritage.

My heritage became the heritage of not knowing.

My stepfather wanted a boy to carry on the family name. I did not count. That was well understood since he continued to have children in the hopes of having a boy.

Complicating matters was the inescapable fact that my stepfather was also rather unsuccessful at farming. There was never enough money although he worked hard. Due to the nature of a farm there was enough meat and vegetables to keep a growing family of seven fed. But there was never enough money.

The blended family was not working well. The four older girls were treated poorly by my mom — their wicked stepmom — and my stepfather was in turn treating me, with a bit in retaliation, as the resident male laborer. Regardless of my age a full day's measure of labor was expected. We were in the dairy farming and the endless cadence of milking in the morning and afternoon meant that I, along with an older sister, were the milkers. Then, when my sister left the farm, it was just me and my dad.

Work became persistent and I learned you don't do sickness. Cows need to be milked. I learned to persist. Hobbies and friends were not encouraged. If you had spare time there was always a barn to clean or hay to gather or a field to cultivate.

The rule was you could do something for yourself as long as it was after milking the cows at night — which we could usually get done by 7:00 or 7:30, after which we had supper. Saturday and Sunday were also work days. Sometimes Sunday afternoon from noon to 5ish, if not during haying or field time, could also be free time.

But I digress from the love story.

My mom was still under 30 so they decided to have another try at having a boy.

That attempt ended with my youngest sister being born. I now had four older sisters and three younger sisters. My mom had suffered some back difficulty during the last two births and was feigning pain to continue to feed her new addiction to prescription painkillers.

The family was dysfunctional. No doubt. But it was our dysfunctional family and we had developed bonds in that difficultness.

Since my mom was still young, and I still did not count as a son they tried again for a boy. On my dad's ninth attempt he fathered a boy. He was 13 years my junior.

We all celebrated what that boy meant to the family. He was here at last! He was named after my dad. The family name — my dad was now certain — would go on.

Fast forward 45 years later and that son never married. He fathered one daughter who, sadly, has cerebral palsy. He also failed to hold a meaningful job throughout most of his adult life before dying at the young age of 45.

But that again detracts from the love story.

My mom also died very young — she was just 51.

I grew up mad at her for how wicked she was to my older stepsisters and for downloading all her parenting responsibilities to us older children. She spent most of her final years rolling around in bed, complaining about her back pain and asking for more painkillers from her dNovors.

She was an outgoing lady in her youth but an isolated farm before the age of the internet was simply a prison for her. She needed human interaction. Lots of it. She craved it and as time marched on and she continued to be on the farm out of duty to the blended family she found her escape in a prescription high.

I held her in contempt and told her often how disappointed I was that she could not do more.

For my part, I grew up to see the farm as a trap of never ending work. I was in prison there too.

I left in a huff between me and my stepfather at age 19. My escape route was via a small scholarship to go to college to become a veterinarian. How could he deny that cause? And I suggested I would return. I'm sure he knew that was not my real intention. I was going to college and he was mad I was not staying around as the farm was finally starting to have some financial success.

But I was bitter and felt he was not sharing that success. And besides I was not a real Latimer. So, I left.

I did not realize that this background of 'not belonging,' not having heritage, not being a Latimer, not knowing my dad, not appreciating my mom, not having real sisters, my mom not knowing her birth family, not having a familial definition of who I was, not having family traditions of my own, no rules about how to do things, not having a family religion, not having a network of friends, not having hobbies, not having belonging and working seven days a week — I didn't realize all of that would become my gift from this family up bring.

But let me finish the love story.

It took me many years to more deeply understand the love story.

It was not until long after my mother's death and as I aged to over 40 years old myself that I had the perspective to truly see and understand. My mom, at a time when teen pregnancy was taboo, managed to convince my grandparents to keep me. Then under further threat of losing me to their adoption she agreed to be a mom to four girls. Then to progress the story she bedded and married a man 18 years her senior when she was 21. A time in life when 18 years is equivalent to a lifetime. And then she persisted in that marriage with much struggle, for 25 years until her early death.

It was only much later that I realized as I put these parts together that indeed this was a love story, one I had not recognized, one of sacrifice I did not appreciate.

It was my mom's love story for me.

The rest of the story

I share this story as it gives context to my actions to this very day. It is an interesting observation that we are a product of our formative years. They linger with us for the rest of our lives and serve as anchors or reference point throughout our lives. It's interesting we refer to them as the formative years. A kind of base line. We are either referring to them for who we are or trying to reconcile our behavior and believes against them.

My formative years gave me a blank slate. This was my gift from this family. I was not a Latimer, I was not Irish, I was not a 'real' son, I did not even know my mom's heritage as she was adopted with no understanding of her heritage. I was not religious, I was not a farmer, I was not carrying anything that was core to me except a passion for success.

As a result of this I came to realize that I had been given a great gift from growing up in this family: my gift was I could decide who I wanted to be. No strings attached. The gift of being able to set my own terms of who Tim Latimer will be. I could build my Tim Latimer.

To build that Tim Latimer I have put him through the first world version of the school of hard knocks. I know many in the world would love my problems. Growing up white male in the West speaking English is like winning the lottery for many other humans on this planet.

I grew up poor without running water unless you count me sloshing two five-gallon pails from the barn to the house as running water. But still, these problems aren't as bad as what others in the world endure. I knew I had won the lottery on many fronts. Even, at one point, I was considered fairly handsome and doing some modeling despite my height challenges. Winner.

But I was given a gift to write my own story — I had the freedom of choice. I began my education — getting a naïve country boy a dNovorate in the School of Hard Knocks.

School of Hard Knocks.

When I first started in business I said every time I make a mistake it costs me $500. I considered that my tuition fee in the school.

Unfortunately, I was often a slow learner and found I would take the course sometimes three or four times before I really learned the lesson. Life has a way of repeating itself if you are not paying attention and I repeated frequently.

As time in business goes on the tuition fee becomes larger. At one point the lesson are $10,000 each and I was known to repeat them as I'm subject to my own slow learning nature.

I also learned that in business when you hire someone they often want to go take the same course you took and have you pay for it. Even when you say, "this is what I learned." still, invariably, they end up taking the course themselves. I pay for it.

Failure, I feel, is how people grow. So, as I age I find I do not suggest that those around me skip the lesson, but rather I invite them to take all the lessons — quickly.

I encourage them to and simply ask that they are not as slow as me in learning. I'm happy to pay for the lesson. But can you learn on the first or second time? Rather than repeating the course like me.

It's interesting that as you progress in business the course keep getting more expensive. At one point my tuitions fees started costing $100k each. I thought that was expensive. But recently I paid for a course that cost $1m for tuition.

It's at these levels that I ask others taking the courses to really learn quickly.

Fail fast is the current language in the best how to books. I took many of these courses over the years and this is how I came to where I am today.

My first attempt to create a life for myself after the farm was to work, save money and get into some business venture. I attempted and failed at being a rock n' roll promoter— amongst other failure paths — until failure brought me to my knees.

I was broke, jobless, homeless, car-less, divorced and had a 2-year-old son by the time I was 22 years old. I had two suitcases of belongings and. I was one negation with a sympathetic potential landlady away from sleeping on the street. I had one unread book in my suitcase. The Magic of Thinking Big by David Schwartz.

Starting over I needed help.

I turned to books, tapes and mentors. It was then I began my learning cycles whose themes came in 5 to 10 year waves. First, I was obsessed with how to become right. Then, I focused on becoming the best version of myself possible. Now, I'm in the phase where I'm thinking about legacy, community and peers.

The nuts and bolts of how this came about will unfold in the remainder of this document.

Answers to question 2 from 2017

Wealth creations sounds so self-congratulating to me.

I have tracked three heading over various times of my life.
Personal Growth
Family
Business

This feels very self-centered and long. Hence feel free to read one or all the heading as you please.

Highlights

In my formative years

Personal Growth

- Won several provincial public speaking completions
  - These could be done after milking the cows in the evening.
  - Wanted to be a famous speaker for the ego thrill. Churchill was an idol
  - Wanted to be rich as grew up dirt poor
  - No hobbies
  - Obsessive work was a norm

Family

- As described above in a love story

Business

- The family farm was considered our business

Growing in my early 20's (i.e. train wreck)

Personal growth

- Like most I was certain I had it figured out.
- As a farm boy I was very naive to the city. Ultimately (with a fair degree of pain) that not knowing played to my advantage as I did not know a lot of things 'could not' be done. This not knowing has been foundational to my growth.
- Broke. Remember walking the street with two briefcases with no money, no food, no job. Managed to convince a lady to let me stay in shared accommodations as I attempted to right my Tim Latimer ship.
- Starting my journey with books, tapes and mentors
  - Found my first mentor. A used car dealer that was 13 years older than me. He mentored me and to this day is my friend
  - First book "The Magic of Thinking Big" by David Schwartz
    - As per the book made my first advertisement about Tim which I read to myself several times a day
    - It was brain washing myself but my brain needed washing
- Started focusing on making money and delayed gratification.

Family

- Married by 21 and
- Son born by 21, named him after me due to my ego
- Separated by 22. Divorce comes later. That is what they call a quickie.

Business

- First attempts
  - Attempted to be a Rock and Roll promoter. Rented Kinsmen field house to stage concert.
  - No ticket sales. Failed miserably. Lighting and sound company pulled the plug during the first set due to nonpayment
  - End of Rock and Roll promoter entrepreneurship
  - Had sleep in a van to save on rent while I saved $6000 dollars to put towards becoming a rock n' roll promoter
  - Failed miserably, lost everything.
- Wrote published gift coupon book called Little Favors in three versions, Little Favours for the wife, Little Favours for the husband and Little Favours for the boss.
  - Had 2000 coupons books produced
  - Sold none, failed miserably
  - Lost everything
- Started first business with mentor – car detail shop called Creative Concepts
  - failed miserably – recovered capital
- Started second business with mentor - consignment car lot – Gold Star Motors
  - Failed miserably, recovered capital plus profit upon sale of site

Maturing in my late 20's

Personal Growth

- Started to read a fair number of books about making money
- Found my second mentor who was a successful businessman in house building
- Meet with him weekly for over 2 years. He taught me business and how to be a better me.

Family

- Re- Married at 29 and now coming up to my 31st anniversary
  - Good Catholic girl
  - Fathering every week end the son from previous marriage

Business

- Started third consignment car lot with mentor.
  - Failed miserably
  - Mentor bowed out. Leaving me the failed operations.
  - Slowly began to succeed and after 18 months was able to open second location.
- Within 2 more years open 3 and 4th locations.
  - Bought TV campaign for $20,000 per month to purchase cars anywhere in Alberta. We advertised bring to our lot and we will buy then give a free ride home anywhere in Alberta. Chalice Cash was our marketing character and "I'll buy it!" was his catch phrase. Business flourished until all the competitors started the same thing. Went from purchasing 100 cars a month to less than 20 almost overnight.
  - Failing but pivoted to add pawn loans out of site.
    - slowly succeed
    - 3 years later it is the largest pawn business in the city

Early 30's

Personal Growth

- Continued books and tapes about getting rich
- Continued to meet with mentor on occasion

Family

- Proceed to have four new children. New child is born every 2 years
  - First daughter is born
  - Son from previous marriage is 10 years old
  - First son of the new marriage is born
  - Make commitment to wife I will be home by 6:00 every night and not work week ends for family. Have kept this at the urginnnnng of the wife. She trained me that if I was even five minutes after 6:00 there was going to (insert a few words) to pay. This was good for me to maintain balance as I would have surely worked until all hours.

Business

- Sold Pawn business and car lots for $1m.
  - Agreed to a vendor take back for $700,000 to be paid back over one year.
  - Purchaser defaulted after 3 months.
    - Threw in with purchaser and raised $2million with Bill Comrie's name list
    - Operated business for 24 months as CEO

        - Grew business but by the time I ran out of money the sites were just breaking even however had lost the confidence of the investors group.
        - Bank was bearing down and to get them to back away I had to go.
        - Failed as CEO
        - Fired myself at the recommendation of consultant and Comrie's representative

    - Did not tell wife I had fired myself for five years
    - Each day put my suit on and pretended to go to work and return at the end of day while I re-evaluated my live
    - Decided to open my own private loan store from a single rented office with the little money I had left to start loaning on accident claims.

Late 30's

Personal Growth

- Attend many conferences on improvement.
- Bought many tapes and turn my car into the university on wheels.
- Began meaningful journey to grow Tim Latimer into being the best Tim Latimer he could be
    - Using the 7 Habits as a guild
        - Created meaningful mission statement (refer to end of section for copy)
        - Applied extreme disciple to follow the mission
        - Organized my life by roles. This became very helpful to planning ahead
        - Started every Monday with reading my Mission statement and planning 3 things to be completed for each role that week. Created massive growth in all roles.
- Joined small mentorship group to battle isolation of being CEO and started having genuine sharing every month to promote growth. A form of 'Fears with peers' verses a "Liars club".

Family

- Second daughter is born
- Last son is born
- All kids are active in events.
- Getting home and being present was important

Business

- Started settlement advance business
    - Still active with about $4.5m in loans
- Opened private large value private pawn loan desk
    - Sold with Instaloans
- Open Gold purchasing desk.
    - Failed miserably
        - Concept was before its time. Ten years later this became a big flash national movement for about 48 months. Sending gold to a purchaser in the mail.
- Took mortgage broker course
    - Opened equity mortgage desk
        - Developed *insta*Mortgage. Small mortgages for a predetermined amount of $1000, $2000 or $3000 that we generated the documentation instantly and gave funds to clients within an hour.
        - Book was at $2m which was included in Instaloans sale
- Developed Payday Loan – Called it Instaloans
    - Offered 50% partnership to my fired CFRN sales person who needed work

- Business immediately took off.
  - Over 10 years opened 101 locations across Canada
  - Partner stopped working after about 10 locations

- CLASS ACTION
  - Got sued for the PDL business in several provinces and one national action siting usury despite the government of the day saying there was a need and they would not interfere.
  - Class action lawyers were very aggressive going after me and my partner on a personal leave siting constructive trust and fraudulent conveyance and asking for extraordinary tracing remedies
  - As a defensive move had to gift all assets into trust in the Bahamas.
  - To this day hold no assets in my name.
    - Found I do not wear CLASS ACTIONS very well
    - It personally hurt my sense of myself to be referred to in such a negative fashion.
    - I had worked hard at being the best Tim Latimer I could and now this challenged me on that sense of myself to the core
    - This made me become very reclusive in my life. Class Actions changed me.
  - CLASS ACTIONS CHANGED ME.
    - I became much more private
    - I questioned myself
    - I did not wear them well. I think to this day although I know I can manage them they are still very stressful

My 40's

Personal Growth

- Class Actions cause me to go into hibernation and hiding mode.
- I coast on my previous efforts
- I drift away from daily touching my mission statement.

Family

- Young family is growing and demands to keep a balance in life is a constant challenge
- Kept my promise for 6:00

Business

- National Association
  - Start National association with 3 other provides with goal to lobby Federal Government to chance section 347 (usury) law
  - After 5 years and $5m dollars was successful in having the law changed. Very interesting process. Very difficult to chance the criminal, code. May failed attempts.
- Grew Instaloans
  - 101 location
  - 350 employees
  - Net profit averaging $1m per month before class actions.
- Partner wants out of business and class actions.
  - Agree to seek sale and after 2 years succeeds in sale for $50m cash. April 2005
  - Mad rush to protect proceeds from attachment by Class Action lawyers.
- Class Action Settlement
  - All actions for country settled in 2005-2006 at a cost of appropriately $5m plus a couple more in legal over the years.
  - BC Class action continues for 12 torturous years

- A hold out.
  - The last Class Actions out of BC will not settle with the national settlement and remains outstanding for 12 years after launched until Nov of 2015
    - Battle is mandatory as the courts award BC lawyers a judgment for $60m with extraordinary remedy powers.
    - BC Class action lawyers are able to pierces the corporate vale and attack all my personal assets.
      - Appealed and had judgement slightly modified in our favour
      - This I fear is a bad precedent that other future respondents which will have to be battled in the future.
    - In the end the BC lawyers could not transfer their judgement to the Bahamas and would have to retry there if they wanted to continue. This gave rise to a negotiated settlement for $800,000.

My 50's

Personal Growth

- I found that without the being the CEO of a fast-moving company I was not certain who I was.
- Plus, having the constant threat of class actions taking 100% of your assets regardless of where in the world they were really added significant questions about myself and stress that could not be managed by just going to work
- The five years of protracted legal wrangling kept me and my capital in limbo.

Family

- Once the announcement of the sale was in the papers as it was a public company that purchased us it changed our family dynamics.
- Previously the kids have never known we had money.
  - We always simply said we were blessed and had enough.
- Keeping them grounded became a concern.
- Gave Tim Jr and early inheritance of $500k to start a dive shop in the Philippines. This turned out to be a hand up as he was able to start and grow to a flourishing business employing about 50 people.
  - Did not tell the wife I was doing this which was wrong and many years later had to apologize.

Business

- I continued to operate the Settlement Business via its ownership in a family trust.
- IN another separate off shore trust I placed about $20m in a managed portfolio with UBS and then lost about $1m the first years to currency fluctuation and then a further $5m in the stock melt down of 2008.
- In a third trust, back in Canada I invested in $2.5 a raw land residential property proposal/land in Kelowna that was overvalued and has taken 10 years to clean up title and rezone property. This is just getting completed in 2017 and I expect after all the efforts to only recovery at $4.5M
- I invested another $2.5m with the same operator in a solar park start up. 100% of that investment disappeared.
- In an investment group of five members.
  - Invested and lost about $500k in a floral wholesale business. Sunset business as florists can now order direct.
  - Invested $300k in septic tank manufacturer. That continues to grow and pay dividend.
- I placed numerous small second mortgages but as the market downturned found I had to purchase the first position to protect my second position.
  - We are still renting many of these purchases today
- I invested $1.5m in debentures with Cash Canada while it was a public company

- They failed to pay
- Plus, they failed to pay the bank with a $1.9m first charge began aggressive collections
- Agreed to buy bank out for $1.5m and continue to pursue foreclosure from their position.
- Negotiated with all debenture holders to step aside while I took over assets.
- Assumed 100% control of assets in December 2009.
  - 180 employees – 10 pawnshops and 12 Pay day loan stores
  - Lost $300k first month, continue in various amounts for first year

- Built Cash Canada
  - 2016 had 500 employees, 18 pawnshops and 65 PDL sites.
  - Nov 2016 Sold pawn shops for $29m. $20m cash and $9m shares of the new company
- Keep PDL sites and faced massive NDP restructure and new statute from NDP
  - Statute was called An End to the Predator Lenders Act
  - Negotiated with ATB
  - They would provide a bank agency license with white label on line banking platform
  - They would share banking revenue 50/50
  - They would provide up to $60m capital to pivot our $6m Payday loan business at $450 per loan to consumer loans averaging $2500 each. And for future expansion.
  - We would give them 50% of our enterprise and 50% of our loan net profit.

  Because of this arrangement, we change the payday loan space.
  - We became "another kind of bank" the first of its kind in North America.
- Arranged for an Employee Stock Option Plan of to 15% of the company.
  - Sold 2% in first offering.

- More losses
  - Purchased a one third share in Carco and new virtual car business that was selling about 100 cars per month
  - Purchase $1.5m
  - Business plan was to advance subprime loans to our client base.
  - Advance a further $1m as management continued to produce losses.
    - Losses ranged from nil to $200k per month.
    - Sales increased but due to management and staffing costs losses continued to mount
  - Company was led by a typical car guy that could not get beyond his ego.
  - Two critical banks pulled their support
    - Line of credit is pulled
    - Bank that provided 80% of the subprime capital pulled its support
  - Decided not to bail out the business as I could not guarantee I could exercise sufficient control over management
  - Totals losses in the $2.5m range

- Created the most meaningful bank account for the unbanked in North America
  - No monthly fee with 2 direct deposits
  - We pay you 25cents up to $5.00 per month every time you use the debit card.
    - $60 paid at Christmas
  - Every account comes with $25 overdraw regardless of your history
  - Overdraft raised to between $100 and $500 once direct deposits come in
    - Fees for usage only $1.85 per $100 compared to $20 per $100 for a Payday loan
      - This can replace the PDL at a fraction of the cost

- NSF fee is only $10.00
- Saving account. Client pledges to save $10 per month and we will put the first $10 in. that
- Matched Mom's saving account
    - We match the first $10 mom's save every month and match.
    - That makes $120 turn into $240 at Christmas.

- Started opening account in April.
    - Have about 6000 everyday use accounts open.
        - 34% have converted their deposits and are 'Sticky" to us as their bank
    - 1000 matched mom accounts
    - $700,000 in overdraft usage
    - $600,000 in everyday accounts

60's (now)

- Starting to understand what wealth means in my context and what is the job of that ownership.
- Looking for insight from peers.
